User Terms and Conditions

date 1st of December 2026

This document regularly talks about "Account", which is a collective name for an Account within the services of Dvotion. If, for example, you have an Account on offorte.com, it automatically falls under the name "Account". By "Customer", "Customers", "User", "Users", "you" and "your" we mean you as User of the services of Dvotion. With "Dvotion", "Offorte", "Service", "Services", "we" and "us" we mean Dvotion B.V. located at the Bramentuin 28 in Teteringen, the Netherlands. Dvotion is registered with the Chamber of Commerce under number 20102594.

Offorte.com is a service of Dvotion BV. By using Offorte.com ("Service") and all services provided by Dvotion, you agree to the Terms and Conditions and User Terms of Dvotion. These conditions are intended to provide customers and Users with clarity about the service. All Users of Dvotion services, in whatever form, are bound by these User Terms and our Terms and Conditions.

General

Dvotion supports the uncensored exchange of information and ideas about the Internet and, under normal circumstances, we do not actively monitor the activities of our Users. Dvotion does not monitor websites, newsgroups and e-mail traffic. However, in accordance with our Terms and Conditions, Dvotion is permitted to remove material that in our view is illegal, may result in damage claims and / or is in conflict with these User Terms. Dvotion may cooperate with competent authorities and / or other third parties to investigate criminal and other undesirable activities. Any action by Users in violation of these User Terms and Conditions may result in the termination or suspension of your Dvotion accounts and actions as described in various articles below without prior notice.

You may not use your Dvotion account to publish material that, in the opinion of Dvotion, is illegal, offensive, inappropriate or undesirable. The word 'material' should be understood as all communication including written word, graphics (photos, illustrations, images, drawings, logos), executable programs, video recordings and audio recordings.

If your Dvotion account is used for activities in violation of our User Terms or Terms and Conditions, we reserve the right to terminate your account without notice. We prefer to inform customers in advance about such undesirable activities and give them the opportunity to take appropriate action to prevent these activities. Serious violations of our User Terms and Terms and Conditions, however, result in immediate termination of the service. Our failure, for whatever reason, in strictly checking and fulfilling this policy can in no way be interpreted as a license for undesirable behaviour. Dvotion can still assert its rights at any time and impose its policy on offenders.

Violations of Dvotion's User Terms

The following points are considered violations of the User Terms:

1. Illegal use: the services of Dvotion may not be used for illegal activities or the support of illegal activities. Dvotion reserves the right to cooperate with competent authorities and / or victims in investigating alleged illegal practices.

2. Damage to minors: use of services of Dvotion that cause damage to or attempt to harm minors. Primarily, but not exclusively, the prevention of child pornography.

3. Threat: the services of Dvotion may not be used for sending any material (e-mail, uploads, postings in newsgroups or otherwise) that contains threats and / or encouragement to damage to persons, institutions and / or belongings.

4. Stalk or harassment: the services of Dvotion may not be used for sending any material (e-mail, uploads, postings in newsgroups or otherwise) that harasses or stalks someone.

5. Fraudulent activities: the services of Dvotion may not be used to make fraudulent offers to buy or sell goods and / or services or to promote scams such as pyramid schemes, chain letters and the like.

6. Fraud or impersonation: adding, removing or modifying network headers in an attempt to deceive or defraud someone is prohibited. Posing as someone else by forged headers or other information concerning a person's identity is prohibited. The use of anonymous remailers or nicknames is not covered by the prohibition of this article.

7. Unsolicited commercial e-mail / Unsolicited bulk e-mail (SPAM): the services of Dvotion may not be used to send unsolicited commercial e-mail and unsolicited bulk e-mail. Violations of this type lead to direct closure of the relevant Dvotion account.

8. E-mail or news bombardments: malicious intent to make it impossible for someone else to use electronic mail and / or news services leads to termination of the relevant Dvotion account.

9. E-mail or message falsification: falsification of a message header, partial or total, of any electronic transmission arising or coming via a service of Dvotion is a violation of these User Terms.

10. Usenet spamming: Dvotion does not tolerate misuse of its network for posting messages or commercial advertisements that go against the rules, FAQ or statutes of a newsgroup or mailinglist. Commercial messages that are in accordance with the regulations of a newsgroup or mailinglist or that are specifically requested by the recipients are permitted.

11. Unauthorised access: misuse of the services of Dvotion to access or attempt to do so to third-party accounts is not permitted. Penetrating security of hardware or software from Dvotion and / or third parties is not permitted. The above cases lead to immediate termination of your account regardless of whether damage has actually been caused.

12. Infringement of intellectual property rights: you may not use Dvotion's services to distribute material that infringes a third party's copyright, trademark, patent, trade secret or other rights. Examples include the unauthorised copying of copyrighted material, the digitisation and distribution of photographs from books, magazines and other sources with copyright and the unauthorised distribution of copyrighted software.

13. Collection of personal data: using the services of Dvotion to collect personal data of third parties without a lawful basis under the GDPR is prohibited.

14. Network disruptions and other hostile activities: use of the services of Dvotion for activities that prevent or disrupt the possibility of third parties to use the services of Dvotion and / or the Internet is not permitted. This includes, among other things, DoS and DDoS attacks on systems of Dvotion and / or third parties and other undesired and illegal activities. Abuse leads to immediate cancellation of your Dvotion account.

15. Distribution of harmful software: deliberately distributing software intended to damage third-party systems, software or data, or to harass or threaten third parties, is prohibited and leads to immediate cancellation of your account.

16. Liability for third parties: Users of Dvotion are responsible and liable for activities that third parties undertake, using their account, that violate the guidelines in these User Terms and Conditions.

Security

You are responsible and liable for any misuse of your account, even if the unwanted activities were carried out by a friend, family member, guest or employee. You therefore need to take the necessary steps to prevent third parties from gaining unauthorised access to your account. In addition, you may not attempt to gain access to another network or server without permission from its owner.

- Your password gives you access to your account. It is your responsibility to keep your password confidential.
- Do not share your password with others. You must prevent unauthorised use of your Account, as you are responsible for its use.
- It is strictly forbidden to try to retrieve the login details of another User. This leads to the termination of your account.
- You must take the necessary security measures to prevent misuse of your account from third parties.
- It is not allowed to bypass User ID or security of host, network or account. This includes, among other things, providing access to data that is not intended for you, logging into or using a server or account for which you have not received explicit permission or scanning the security of other networks. The use of or the distribution of tools designed to circumvent or break security measures is prohibited. Examples include programs that guess passwords, tools that can crack security and tools that scan networks for security leaks.
- Denial of Service (DoS) attacks, Distributed Denial of Service (DDoS) attacks, e-mail bombs and the like are not permitted.
- Users who attempt to circumvent or break the security of systems or networks can be prosecuted under criminal and civil law. Dvotion will fully cooperate with the competent authorities and other stakeholders who investigate such matters.

Network performance

The accounts of Dvotion share various facilities. Excessive use or abuse of these facilities by a customer can have negative consequences for all other customers. Abuse and use of the network, CPU time, memory, disk space and sessions in a manner that disproportionately seize the facilities are prohibited under these User Terms and may lead to the termination of your account or limitation of these activities.

Reporting violations of these User Terms

Dvotion requests anyone who believes that there has been a violation of these User Terms and Conditions to report this violation to our abuse department at support@offorte.com.

If possible, please enclose the following information:

- The IP address from which the alleged violation was committed
- The date and time of the alleged violation with the time zone or the difference with GMT
- Proof of the alleged violation

E-mail with complete header information and system log files comply with the information request above. Other situations require different methods for providing the requested information. Dvotion can take one or more of the following actions as a result of complaints:

- Written or verbal warnings
- Stop the possibility of posting in newsgroups of a member
- Stopping a member's account
- Terminating an account of a member
- Charging administrative and / or reactivation costs
- Claim damage and take legal action
